(Radio Iowa) - A new survey from the Iowa Association of Business and Industry finds three-quarters of the business members expect increased sales in the second quarter of this year — with the rest expecting them to stay the same.

ABI president, Mike Ralston, says more than half the businesses expect to add more employees. “The good news is that this is the second quarter in a row where we see this optimism, so hopefully it’s a trend,” Ralston says. He says businesses are seeing a lot of good things in the current economy to make them optimistic.

“Employment’s up, sales are up, revenue is up “You’ll notice in the survey there was a lot of talk about capital expenditures — so that’s always a great sign,” according to Ralston.
